

Good Welcomes

- User Appropriate
- Inviting
- Fitting colours/tones
- Communication of the spaces configuration
- Clear and intuitive spatial organisation
- Manaakitanga

Amy

Good Welcomes

From brainstorming together we came to these examples of having good welcoming experience include:

- User appropriate, targets the audience, to benefit them for their personal experience that they will be having within the space.
- With the space being inviting for each individual.
- And also having fitting colours- with the pigments being appropriate to the space, like in a hospital entrance the “happy and relaxed” colours.
- Communication of the spaces configuration, having detail on the spaces information and layout, expressing how the users will locate and travel to different areas.
- Clear and intuitive spatial organisation, having the design suited for the user and their experience, so how they can easily will move through the area, with having a intuitive layout between the exterior and interior.
- Manaakitanga is the idea of being hospitable and welcoming to everyone travelling or staying within the allocated spaces, and also accommodates to variations of users of the space.